

21st January, 1935.

My dear Friend,

Further to my letter of yesterday, I am sending you herewith a proof of the lecture I gave in Cambridge, which I am going to have bound in a little booklet. It may be useful in the future.

Before I return the proof to the printer, will you be good enough to look at it and let me know if you think it is all right. I myself read it through, and think there is nothing to be added to it. Will you kindly return it at your earliest convenience.

Yours ever,

A.L. Baldry, Esq.
