BAGSHOT PARK,
SURREY.

Nov. 23rd 1937.

Dear Mr. De Laiglo,

I do not know how to convey to you my feelings at this time of your great loss. I think it is so much harder to ^{say} all one wishes to when, as now, one has known the departed one so well, and learned to revere him as a most wonderful character and personality - as I have done.

I offer you my very deepest sympathy, knowing what a terrible gap in your life there will be. And yet I feel that your husband could never have born an invalid's existence: - He was the Soul of Life & Vivacity, and that is how you will always be able to remember him.

Even during his hectic visits here recently he always found time for a kind & friendly word for everyone, and personally I can only say that I developed a very warm affection for him.

The Duke of Connaught was terribly distressed to hear the news of his passing. Your telegram in reply to his reached him safely this evening.

I went to the Exhibition today and had a few words with poor Harwood, who was looking after everything so admirably.

He has lost a great Master & friend, & I wanted to tell him how much I felt for him, but just ~~that~~ could not get my words out. I hope he understood. It all looked so nice at the Gallery to day & I feel sure your husband was there.

❖ Please do not dream of acknowledging this — you will have such countless letters to write — but perhaps later on you will allow me to pay you little visits from time to time. This wd. be a great privilege. Yours very sincerely
Fitz Roy Tyers.
